The official language of the Czech Republic is Czech, a highly complex western Slavic tongue. Any attempt from foreigners to speak Czech will be heartily appreciated, so do not be discouraged if people fail to understand you, as most will be accustomed to hearing foreigners stumble through their language. If you don't know any Czech, brush up on your German, since, among the older generation at least, it is still the most widely spoken second language. Russian, once the compulsory second language has been practically wiped off the school curriculum, and the number of English speakers has been steadily increasing, especially among the younger generation.

55- It is clear from the passage that.....

- A) more Czechs speak German than any other foreign language
- B) as their own language is so difficult, Czechs prefer German
- C) everyone in the Czech Republic speaks several languages
- D) Czechs usually laugh at foreigners who try to speak Czech
- E) Czechs learn English during childhood and German later

56- The author informs us that.....

- A) it is now illegal for Czechs to speak Russian
- B) Czechs do not want to speak German as it reminds them of the German occupation
- C) most Czech schools offer courses in the Russian language
- D) the influence of Russia is still felt in certain areas of the Czech Republic
- E) Czechs were once required to study Russian at school

57- This passage would most likely appear in

- A) a grammar book of the Czech language
- B) a history book of the Czech Republic
- C) a book about English language teaching
- D) a travel guide for the Czech Republic
- E) an article on the social history of the Czech people

The religion of the Jewish people, Judaism, is based largely on the teachings of Moses and other leaders as recounted in the Old Testament of the Bible. It is significant for being the oldest monotheistic religion - belief in one supreme being, which is given various names by the Jews themselves, including Yahweh, Jehovah and God. The two other important sacred books are the Talmud and the Torah, which contain the many laws and observances orthodox Jews are supposed to keep. The principal festival is the Feast of Passover: the principal place of worship is the synagogue and the priests are called Rabbis. Judaism is also noted for being the religion from which Christianity and Islam developed. There are about 14 million followers, about 3 million in Israel itself, and the remainder distributed throughout the world.

58- The passage suggests that Judaism is an important religion because

- A) it has three gods, all of whom are extremely powerful
- B) it has many laws that the orthodox must follow
- C) Moses was brought up under Jewish tradition
- D) it was the first religion to believe in a single god
- E) it has the largest number of followers among the major religions

59- It can be understood from the passage that.....

- A) Yahweh and Jehovah are the names of Jewish holy writings
- B) synagogues are rarely used these days, except by the orthodox
- C) the constitution of Israel is based largely on the Torah
- D) the job of the Rabbi is to enforce the law of the Talmud
- E) the Jewish religion has at least three important sacred books

60- According to the passage,

- A) a large majority of the world's Jews live in Israel
- B) Christianity and Islam have historical ties with Judaism
- C) Judaism is the most common religion in the world
- D) there is quite a strong Christian influence on Judaism
- E) the Jewish religion is influenced by the teachings of both Islam and Christianity

Laws are the collection of rules by which any state maintains order within a society. In Great Britain, the law-making process is conducted by Parliament. Proposed new laws are presented as Bills and if, after debate, they are accepted by a majority vote in the House of Commons, they duly become law. In Great Britain, as in most countries, there are several distinct types of laws. Constitutional law is concerned with the processes of the government itself. Company law deals with the operation of many of the nation's commercial and financial activities. These are branches of State law, that is, laws made by acts of Parliament. Common law, by contrast, is based on past decisions taken by the courts on various issues.

61- The aim of laws, as described in the passage, is

- A) to punish people who insist on violating them
- B) to secure the people's control of the government
- C) to protect the government and people from chaos
- D) to increase the government's authority over the people
- E) to keep threats to the existence of the state under control

62- The author informs us that Constitutional law.....

- A) cannot be changed by simple acts of Parliament
- B) is composed of several distinct types of Bills
- C) causes great concern to Members of Parliament
- D) has little bearing on the government of Britain
- E) is related to the way the government does its job

63- As is stated in the passage, the difference between State and common laws is that.....

- A) State laws only affect Members of Parliament, not common people
- B) common law was only valid in the past, while State law is still used
- C) only State laws actually have financial consequences to the people
- D) the former are made by acts of Parliament, the latter, by the courts
- E) the latter is applied to common people, but not to parliamentarians

The term 'castle' is most commonly applied to the fortresses belonging to European kings or important nobles during the Middle Ages. The first of this type were built by the Normans in France, during the eleventh century. They were constructed of wood and consisted simply of a tower built on a mound and stood in a courtyard, which was surrounded by a fence and a ditch. By the twelfth century, the wooden tower had given way to a stone one, containing living accommodation for the whole household, centred on the Great hall, and surrounded by a strong wall. As new methods of attack developed, the outer fortifications became more elaborate in order to withstand them.

64- We can conclude from the passage that

- A) a castle was a certain type of early defensive structure
- B) every noble in the Middle Ages had his own castle
- C) the first fortress was built in Europe in the Middle Ages
- D) the first castle built by the Normans remained inhabited for a century
- E) castles were used for defence, not as residences

65- The author makes it clear that in the 12th century,

- A) the Normans became less influential in Europe
- B) the towers were built of stone
- C) a castle consisted only of a tower
- D) a castle was still a residence only for the army
- E) castles were strong enough to repel any attack

66- We learn that castles became stronger and more defensive.....

- A) as new and better construction methods were developed
- B) as they began to accommodate larger populations
- C) in reaction to the development of new military strategies
- D) as more and more buildings were added for the increasing population
- E) when stone and wood were used together as building materials

Mozart made his first visit to Prague with his wife Constance in 1787, staying with his friend and patron Count Thun. A year earlier, his opera The Marriage of Figaro, which had failed to please the opera snobs in Vienna, was given a marvellous reception in Prague. Encouraged by this, he chose to premiere his next opera, Don Giovanni, in Prague rather than in Vienna. He arrived with an incomplete score in hand, and finished it there, dedicating it to the 'good people of Prague'. Mozart's final visit to Prague took place in 1791, the year of his death. The climax of the stay was the premiere of Mozart's final opera, La Calmness di Tito, according to legend, completed on the coach from Vienna to Prague.

67- We learn from the passage that The Marriage of Figaro.....

- A) was given its first ever performance in 1786, in Prague
- B) was more highly appreciated in Vienna than in Prague
- C) had obviously not been a success in Vienna
- D) was clearly the first opera that Mozart had ever written
- E) encouraged Mozart to write his next opera Don Giovanni

68- The passage tells us that Mozart.....

- A) gave the first performance of Don Giovanni in Prague
- B) wrote and performed two complete operas while in Prague
- C) only visited Prague twice, though he really liked the city
- D) died in 1791 while he was visiting Prague to see his opera
- E) moved from Vienna to Prague, where he was more appreciated

69- It is mentioned in the passage that La Clemenza di Tito.....

- A) was Mozart's least popular opera in Prague
- B) was based on a legend which Mozart had heard in Prague
- C) brought Mozart to Prague for a very short visit
- D) was given its final form in Prague
- E) was apparently unfinished when Mozart left Vienna

Ever since the 1978 Camp David Agreement and the 1979 peace treaty signed between Egypt and Israel, the Suez Canal has been filled with a constant flow of maritime traffic. It is 163 km long, but still not wide enough to accommodate modern ships sailing in opposite directions. There are plans to widen the canal but, for now, ships can pass only at two points - the Bitter Lakes and Al-Ballan. With a depth of 19,5 metres, the canal is deep enough for most ships, except for super tankers. The canal is the prime source of hard currency for Egypt's troublesome economy. Each of the 50 ships that pass through the canal each day is charged a fee based on its size and weight. The average fee is about $70,000.

70- It is implied in the passage that..... .

- A) the famous Camp David is located near the Suez Canal
- B) the Suez Canal was constructed sometime after 1979
- C) there are no bridges anywhere that cross the Suez Canal
- D) in the period before 1979, fewer ships used the Suez Canal
- E) the traffic on the Suez Canal makes shipping dangerous

71- The passage suggests that..... .

- A) the Egyptians could make more money if they widened the Suez Canal
- B) without the canal, the Egyptian government would be much better off
- C) super tankers must proceed very carefully while going through the canal
- D) the bigger and heavier a ship is, the more it has to pay to use the canal
- E) the Israelis get a sizeable commission from the Suez Canal's traffic

72- It can be determined from the figures in the passage that..... .

- A) most ships on the Suez Canal are under 20 metres tall

Today many people in the U.S.A. don't have the main meals of breakfast and lunch on weekdays. They prefer to have snacks. Most people don't have a cooked breakfast before they leave for work. Very few American people still eat bacon and eggs and toast and jam in the morning. Cereal and fruit and a cup of coffee is common today. Many working people don't have time for a big lunch because they only have a short break at lunchtime. They take a sandwich to work or have a quick snack in a sandwich bar or a cafeteria. In the evening, more and more people don't sit down to eat a meal. They eat snacks in front of the television. Many people have something to eat quite late, before they go to bed. Eating is now an activity that a lot of people do alone. It is not the social occasion of the past. However, traditional meals are still popular on the weekend when people have time to cook and sit down and eat. On Saturday and Sunday mornings, many people prepare cooked breakfasts with bacon and eggs. A big Sunday lunch with the family is also still very common. There are signs that things may change again. More and more people are realizing that eating alone is no fun. They miss the social meal with friends or family. So hopefully people will rediscover the pleasure of traditional meals, and snacks will go out of fashion.
