55-57. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız

Australia is a huge country, and the Outback (the Australian word for the interior of the country) is desert. Some years it rains only 8 centimetres in the outback, but other years rainstorms turn the desert into sandy swamps. Until the eighteenth century, only aborigines lived in Australia. These are tall, thin, brown - skinned people, the first people in Australia. When Europeans went there to live, they built towns on the coast. However, by the 1850s, people began thinking more about the interior. In 1860, Robert O'Hara Burke, a police officer from Ireland, was chosen to lead an expedition across the continent from south to north. He took with him William John Wills and 11 other men, camels, horses, and enough supplies for a year and a half . They left Melbourne for the gulf of Carpentaria on August 20, winter in the southern hemisphere.

55. We understand from the passage that

- A) until the end of the first half of the 19th century Europeans had no idea about the inner parts of the continent
- B) Europeans settled and built towns by the help of the aborigines
- C) such tribes as aborigines used to dominate the authority in Australia
- D) there began a serious conflict between the aborigines and Europeans towards the end of the 19th century
- E) Robert O'Hara Burke was the first missionary to introduce the modern culture of Europe to this primitive country

56. It is clear from the passage that

- A) the first Europeans in Australia built villages in the outback because there were too many aborigines on the coast
- B) the route of the Burke and Wills expedition was across the continent from south to north
- C) it's likely to see sandy swamps whenever it rains in Australia
- D) the ones still keeping the continent under control are aborigines
- E) Burke knew that he couldn't have carried out the expedition without camels and horses

57. According to the passage, the expedition

- A) lasted for more than a year
- B) was supervised by the police
- C) was from the gulf of Carpentaria to Melbourne
- D) could have been led by Robert O'Hara Burke
- E) consisted of 13 men

58-60. Soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

The scientists are trying to find the doorway to another world which they believe was found in the 1930s by a man who escaped from one of the communist prison camps. They set off from the warmth of St Petersburg by plane and end up walking along the freezing valley of a river running out of Lake Neranda. They are searching for a mysterious waterfall that never freezes , behind which they will find the doorway. There are eight of them and they walk in pairs; each pair with their sled of supplies pulled by dogs.

58. It is clear from the passage that

- A) the scientists really expect to discover a way to flee from the communist prison camp.
- B) the man running away from the communist prison camp was sure of himself to be able to reach the other world.
- C) the expedition began due to the belief in a doorway to another world.
- D) a doorway to another world was the only way to survive for the prisoner who had suffered much from the torture in the camp.
- E) in the 1930s thousand of people were kept in the communist prison camps.

59. It's implied in the passage that

- A) they started their journey in a warm weather on contrary to its end.
- B) the only way to leave St Petersburg is flying.
- C) the doorway is believed to be in St Petersburg.
- D) mysterious waterfalls that never freeze have always interested scientists.
- E) Lake Neranda is quite far from where the doorway to another world is probably situated.

60. From the passage, we can conclude that

- A) each sled can carry only two people.
- B) only dogs are used in the expedition on account of the fact that they are easy to keep.
- C) people believe the expedition team will find the doorway to the other world.
- D) the prisoner escaping from the camp must have been followed by some others.
- E) the team consisted of four pairs.

The peninsula of Gibraltar used to present difficulties for visitors. When its border with Spain was closed by General Franco to protest against British occupation, the accepted route from Spain was a mixture of ferry, bus and ship via the African mainland. This was, of course, expensive and time-consuming, and visitors sometimes preferred to undertake the trip by private yacht instead. Another alternative was to arrange your passage on one of the many illegal freighters which maintained the peninsula's supply of essentials from the Spanish mainland.

61- From the text, we can say that, in the past,

- A) Gibraltar's proximity to Spain led to an increase in the peninsula's tourism
- B) visitors to Gibraltar had problems obtaining a visa
- C) the border between Spain and Gibraltar was closed in an attempt to fight smuggling
- D) the Spanish government banned the entering of Gibraltar directly from Spain
- E) Gibraltar did not allow Spanish people to find employment on the peninsula

62- Travelling to Gibraltar via Africa,

- A) posed many dangers for the visitors
- B) took a lot of time and money
- C) was not a route accepted legally by Spain
- D) was the only legal way of getting there
- E) was not safe at all on the illegal freighters

63- When Gibraltar's border with Spain was closed,

- A) the British government decided to occupy the peninsula
- B) for some time, the peninsula hardly had any visitors
- C) it was possible to get to the peninsula with smugglers taking goods there
- D) a lot of people protested against General Franco
- E) a keenly-felt shortage of essentials, such as food, arose there

Angry quarrels often arise in families when differences in lifestyle come between parents and their teenage children. Mrs Ashby, an acknowledged psychologist, recommends talking to teenagers properly, not like little children. Conflicts should be discussed in an ordered, unemotional way. Giving children clear reasons for parents' demands could defuse a potentially explosive situation; on the other hand, she suggests that parents should care for what the adolescent need. Ashby urges them to try to reach a compromise; agree on quite an early homecoming time during the week, but a later one at the weekend, for instance.

64. One can easily infer from the passage that

- A) there are no families living without quarrelling
- B) many rows in a family result from the difference in the view of parents and their teenage children
- C) Mrs Ashby is the unique expert to help the both sides
- D) every member of families needs a psychologist
- E) almost all fathers and mothers treat their children as if they're still babies

65. According to the passage the only way to settle the dispute between teenagers and their parents is

- A) to ignore the differences in lifestyles
- B) to provide whatever teenagers need
- C) to reach an agreement on what they expect the other side to do
- D) not to tolerate teenagers for their demands
- E) to discuss the problems without forgetting that teenagers aren't adults yet

66. Mrs Ashby advises

- A) parents to avoid admitting their teenage children as too little while speaking to them
- B) parents to consult a psychologist about the matters which will probably cause a serious quarrel
- C) parents not to let the adolescent come home late in the evening
- D) children not to be emotional while speaking to their parents
- E) both sides not to be too permissive in a debate

Since early times it has been presumed that animals act unconsciously . In this view , behaviour differs from instinct . Animals behave without thinking about the action they're doing at that moment. Animals may be aware of things or may be not . The argument is still going on. Recent research reports suggest a small amount of probable intelligence among animals. Despite the existence of animal consciousness not proven yet, one had better consider it.

67. It is pointed out in the passage that animals are traditionally believed to

- A) act on instinct
- B) are conscious about their behaviours
- C) behave logically but not instinctively
- D) imitate man in many ways
- E) are definitely aware of whatever they do

68. It is clear from the passage that

- A) scientists can measure animals' intelligence quantity
- B) animals are known to act deliberately while doing something
- C) the debate on the awareness of animals' actions has not been resulted yet
- D) some animals are dimmer than others
- E) some scientists are still discussing about the reports

69. The author suggests

- A) searching the probable consciousness of animals
- B) creating a new system to test the IQ level
- C) supporting the rights of animals
- D) working on the difference in the consciousness of animals and of human- beings
- E) quitting the argument

My father was born in Russia. He commanded an army unit in 1916, and was imprisoned by the Bolsheviks . He fled to Paris and later to New York and came to London in 1937. I have written down his memoirs from tapes which describe his life, but for this to be enough for a book, I need to visit the Moscow streets where he spent his childhood, follow his path during the Revolution, and see where he lived in Paris and New York. Everybody has to learn his lifestyle and his ambition that I've always appreciated . Getting some financial support seems inevitable for me to live on while I'm writing the book.

70. According to the text, it is obvious that the author's father

- A) committed a serious crime
- B) was put into jail by the Bolsheviks
- C) escaped from his country as a result of being revealed as a traitor
- D) admired the European cities, that's why he moved to London
- E) was directly sent into prison by the army soon after returning from Paris

71. It is implied in the passage that

- A) the author's father was appreciated a lot during the Bolshevik revolution
- B) the author's father wrote all details about his life in his book
- C) Moscow streets were not suitable for children in 1930's
- D) most people suffered a lot in Russia in the first half of the 20 century on account of the riot
- E) Moscow was not as peaceful for the author's father as France during the Revolution

72. It is concluded from the passage that the author

- A) misses his days which he spend with his father
- B) hopes to earn a lot of money as a result of selling his book
- C) thinks it's impossible to write the book without searching the place where his father was born
- D) intends to search his father's life to write a book
- E) has always been in financial difficulties so far

Oriental cuisine offers some of the healthiest, freshest and tastiest dishes of any kitchen. The emphasis is on local, seasonal ingredients prepared with the minimum of trouble — no heavy French sauces or rich, multi-ingredient food. It has long been popular in Britain and the U.S., but until recently was relatively unknown in Turkey. But with the demands of tourism and the changing tastes and increasing health-consciousness of the population, Turkey now boasts a wide range of Oriental restaurants to suit all budgets.

73- The passage states that Oriental cuisine

- A) offers an excellent combination of healthy and tasty dishes
- B) is similar to French in that both put a great emphasis on sauces
- C) is served in some of the best restaurants in the world
- D) has expanded worldwide thanks to the British and the Americans
- E) may cause the problem of finding suitable fresh local ingredients

74- The ingredients for Oriental cuisine

- A) include certain sauces from the French kitchen
- B) are all those already grown or produced in Turkey
- C) are easy to find and prepare
- D) are regularly exported to the European countries and the USA
- E) should be mixed with great skill in order to get the required result

75- From the passage, we can conclude that

- A) more often in Turkey, Oriental food is preferred by foreign tourists
- B) the benefits of Oriental food have been recognised in Turkey and it is now more available
- C) Oriental cuisine is becoming popular in Turkey because it is easier to prepare than local food
- D) more and more Turkish people are refusing to eat their heavy national food
- E) Oriental restaurants are now easily found in Turkey, but still too expensive for many to afford
